Spreading Up the Trains.

Canada's two transcontinental railways appear to be making good progress in the great United States road "hall hollow," in the merry game of whisking passengers across the continent in the fewest number of hours. That speaks well for the enterprise of our railway management, will bring the roads some profitable business, and will bring the railways of the different Canadian railways ahead. Always provided the thing is not overdone. There is a limit beyond which speed means the sacrifice of safety. When that limit is reached the Railway Commission or some other authority should call a halt.

Under What Flag?

U. S. authorities say they intend to deal with run-away ships on the principle that where the ship is owned is what counts, not what flag it happens to be flying. The whole business of international outlawry would be considerably hampered if it were not allowed to be registered in the country in which it is actually owned. The device of switching flags in order to carry on illegal operations, in the liquor trade or any other trade, savours too much of the methods of Captain Kidd to be tolerated by countries which are supposed to have no part nor lot in violating each other's laws.

Why Oats Go "Wild".

A young Alberta scientist, Leonard Hincks, in his University of Alberta, was recently in London, England, in search of desirables as having achieved success in a line of research which may be of very great value to agriculture throughout Canada and also in the United States. After two years experiencing the difficulties of getting a place in college, Mr. Hincks is credited with having traced the course of the reversion of the cultivated oat to the "wild" variety which is one of the farm pests in all parts of the Dominion.

To revert the oat and other cereal plants tends to revert to their primal types is said to have been determined, and it is believed that as a result of this varieties of grains can be produced which will not deteriorate. Alberta will have that all the time. The discovery may prove to be correct. The effect which would be effected in farm practice would be large. The success achieved by this Alberta boy should give many incentive to others to follow his lead and talents to experiment and study ways and means to improve the cereal crops which comprise the big item in the list of western farm products.

By Way of Precaution.

Two people in Calgary have been bitten by a mad dog; several dogs have died from rabies; others are reported as acting strangely, and there is general alarm lest there be an outbreak of the disease. That the alarm is well founded is shown by the fact that the city council on Tuesday considered an order that every dog in the city must be muzzled. This was not thought to be necessary at present, but the police and veterinarian are on the alert and all necessary measures are being taken. It should be noted that other animals show the symptoms. Druggists there are now carrying supplies of anti-rabies vaccine.

Why Outlay Without Investigation?

Hon. Chas. Dunning, having decided to have an investigation made as to the relative merits of Nelson and Churchill, and certain engineers having agreed to appear that eventually suitable procedure will be followed. Winnipeg Free Press is graciously pleased to inform its readers that "the pace is howling" for the delay—and ultimate death—of the Hudson Bay Company project.

The "howling wolf" is hardly one that comes with fitness from that quarter. No newspaper in Canada cared less about the construction of the Hudson Bay railway than did the Winnipeg Free Press. Until wheat from Alberta and Saskatchewan began to move Vancouver and through that port to the world markets. Only when it appeared that Winnipeg might cease to retain its stranglehold upon the whole grain trade of Western Canada did the Free Press begin to pay attention to the necessity of opening the new "short cut" to Europe. And the present zeal of that paper seems to be less for the construction of the H.B.C. railway to a place where a port can be made than for its construction to Nelson, regardless of whether a port can be made there or not.

If there has been any wolfishness in evidence in regard to the Hudson Bay railway it is the Free Press that has been instrumental in bringing that accusation. If there is no other witness in sight, the antics of that paper and its known sources of inspiration would justify the Minister in calling for an investigation of the terminal possibilities of the railway and in asking additional powers for the Bay. With the Free Press "howling" for expenditure without investigation it is time for the tax-payers to sit up and take notice.

A Good Samaritan

BY EDGAR A. GUEST

He was riding on a train when he heard a young man sob:

"I've no money for my fare. I've been months without a telegram today from my sister told me this: Mother is dead. Come at once, if you want a rare kiss."

Then the stern conductor said: "Off you go unless you pay!"

"I am sorry for you boy, but that is the railroad's way."

"I want four cents, seventy-five. Hard or heart you'll be. But I've got to have a ticket, not a yellow telegram."

To the man who sat behind, then he turned and said:

"I am sorry for you to get home. Even now she may be dead."

Here a diamond pin I've kept. It's the last good think I own."

Will you take it from me, sir, for twenty dollars?"

And the train curved down his cheeks as the man pulled out his rag.

"A little prayer was said for the dying mother's sake."

Then the youth got up and left with that twenty dollar bill.

When the man was leaving, diamond pin is the good man's treasure still.

Now he wept in his tie in remembrance of the dead.

When the heart and hand were moved by another's pressing need.

But the dying mother will not catch him any more.

For that diamond pin was bought in a five and ten cent store.

Why the Flappers Flap

BY DR. FRANK CRANE

The Right Reverend Charles E. Woodcock from Guelph, Ontario, in a recent address, the girls were described as being "true daughters of the fifth and sixth of the streets. They were hooligans and prostitutes, and nothing else."

What was anything but good. Today, of course, women are dressed at least more hygienically.

Women are dressed in the most modern and most attractive styles.

Women will go to any lengths and spend all kinds of money to be in the latest.

What is the reason why flappers flap because they all do it.

If it was the style to wear long, long pointed hats, women would have done so.

Women will go to any lengths and spend all kinds of money to be in the latest.

In the meantime, we give thanks that fashion these days is at least hygienic and the shorter a woman's skirt, the better she looks.

The one dominating rule of women's apparel, after all, is that it is comfortable.

Women will go to any lengths and spend all kinds of money to be in the latest.

And as far as that is concerned, we hope the weather is on their side.

Women will be better looking, care than by those who, as in former times, lived in the abominable following of the styles.

But let us not lay the blame of what we do to the latest fashions, but rather to the result of the universal habit of following the styles.

By Way of Precaution?

Two people in Calgary have been bitten by a mad dog; several dogs have died from rabies; others are reported as acting strangely, and there is general alarm lest there be an outbreak of the disease. That the alarm is well founded is shown by the fact that the city council on Tuesday considered an order that every dog in the city must be muzzled. Why It Pays to Help Others Even When They Are Ungrateful—Will Miss Twenty-Seven Be Happy as The Wife of a Spoiled Bachelor of 57?—Straight From the Shoulder Talk To a Gay Deceiver

Dear Miss Dix—I have always tried to help those less fortunate than myself, but have always been stung. This has happened so often that I have the reputation of being easy, and recently I overheard a young man talk about me. He said, "She's a good soul, but she's a fool. She thinks him a hard-luck story and puts a job in your voice and he will shake out." This makes me feel bad, but I can't do anything about it. What must I do? Turn a deaf ear and pray for help and be all for self, or continue to be "worked" by the ungrateful?

C. E. E.

Answer: To try to help people is the most disengaged and disillusioning thing on earth, and every philanthropist has to struggle against becoming a pessimist.

Instead of those on whom you help, sometimes you are the ones rising up and biting you for your generosity. It nearly always makes you feel bad, but you must try unconsciously resent your benefactors because they feel that it puts them in an inferior position. You can't let them know this, though, instead of warm appreciation. They take what you give them, but they are like snarling dogs that bite the hand that feeds them.

And it is discouraging to try to help people because it is so difficult to do it without participating in them. You don't get paid off, and when you lend money to some one over a bad place to do it, you don't get paid off, and when you lend it to a friend you lose both your money and your friend.

The generous are so often the prey of grafters and ingrates that it is no wonder they feel they are at times like putting a bandage on a tick-bitten spot.

But when we give, we help ourselves as much as we do the objects of our charity, and whether they are appreciative or not, we are sure of our own benefit. We open our hearts, we open the wallet, and it costs us nothing but the price of our sustenance.

For if we harden our hearts and shut our hands and live only for ourselves, we grow narrow and selfish and our lives become as arid as a desert in which no living flower blooms and grows.

We can only keep the beautiful things of life alive by watering them, and our tears of pity for others and nourishing them with our sacrifices.

You never see a selfish person who is contented. You never see a miser who is happy. You never see a suspicious person who is an optimist. You never see a really happy person who is not a giver.

It is the act of giving with self-sacrifice that gets most of life.

And so for your own sake you have to go on helping the unworthy, giving to the ungrateful, lifting the lame dogs over the side, who never even give you a wag of the tail by way of recognition. And especially you must succeed, because world over, there are all Dorothy Dixes.

Dear Miss Dix—I am 27 and am engaged to a bachelor of 57. He has been pampered and spoiled by his sisters and is very selfish and arrogant. He is a spoilt brat, and I am afraid that when he is married he will be a worse husband. He has only a small salary. I have a fine position, with a good salary, and am interested and happy in work. I am successful and, of course, get lonely over the winter months. I am sure you expect to be happy married to a man of his age, habits and disposition?

DOROTHY DIX.

Answer: There certainly would have to be a miracle worked in your one of the earmarks that would make him desirable as a husband.

To be sure, a man pampered and spoiled by his sisters is about the worst matrimonial risk in the world. No wife can succeed with a sister as a man spouse, and no husband can succeed with a wife who got herself married to him.

Moreover, at 57 a man's habits are formed and he cannot be made to change them. His color of his eyes. Nor does he want to change them, his little funny ways are more important to him than the happiness of any woman.

Besides, the man is too old for you. Thirty years is too much difference in age.

At 27 you are young and vital, just beginning life. At 57 he is on the wane, aging rapidly, and the chances of his becoming a good husband are slim. If he is still a spoilt brat, he will marry him, you get a tired, blasé man, and you will soon have an old and feeble one to mind and take care of. And as he has no money, the chance are slim that he will be able to take care of himself.

And that is not a cheerful prospect for any young woman.

A PERPLEXED MAN.

You say you are lonely at times. Believe me, if you marry a spoilt brat, he will wish many a time and of you were a widow. Moreover, he is not likely to be a good husband. You are wise to be on the alert.

But you offer your wife an additional insult when you tell the older woman that she still loves him and is a hurtful story because it keeps the other woman believing that some day you will come back to her.

Trying to square and fair and honest and truthful. You have no idea how much you are hurting him. If he is still a spoilt brat, he is bound to you, you must be ashamed to look yourself in the face after you have lied to the two women who love and trust you.

DOROTHY DIX.

Answers: It strikes me that you are such a deceiver that the truth is not in you. You don't even sleep honest with yourself, or to know which one of the houses you prefer.

But if you must prevaricate, stick to the story that you tell your wife; that you have come back to her because you love her, and perhaps you will be believed.

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES, May 19.—Paul Kelly, motion picture actor, professor of drama, Dorothy Dix, actress, star of the "White Bird," on the witness stand today, gave evidence in the trial of the murder of Ray Raymond, his husband of the actress.

Kelly, 37, was engaged in a fist fight with Raymond after the latter had called him vile names and accused him of having an affair with MacKaye.

MacKaye is in quiet voice, Kelly related his 19 years' acquaintance with Raymond. Then he spoke of his friend, Mrs. Jeanie Murdoch, who had died last week. This, he said, he told Raymond, had developed into a quarrel between the wife and January when Raymond ordered him from his home without cause.

This film actor said that for a period he tried to get away from MacKaye, but failed. He told the theatre and movies about twice a week. He described MacKaye as a "rude, boorish" man.

The Leveurine officials declared they would not give any information on the trial until at least another week, on the assumption that they had reached an agreement.

Kelly described his fight with Raymond, which the state attorney charged was caused by the actor's death, substantially as testified to by Clegg, the only eye witness in the trial, last week.

DEMAND BOOSTS WHEAT PRICES

WHEAT—
May 19.—General demand for the May, October and December wheat options boosted prices from 1 1/2 cents to 2 cents on an average, according to reports. These gains, however, were subsequently undermined by a heavy flow of production sales. The closing was 1 1/2 cents higher, the 1-cent lower, with May in the weakest position.

Commodity buyers were largely responsible for the advance and considerable speculative business was worked.

Buyers in the most active commanding the coarse grain market, advancing around 2 cents on the bulge. Exporters are reported to have acquired several supplies. The other grain markets were quiet.
